Caller ID Options

The majority of business telephone systems either withhold outgoing caller ID, or send the 'main' office number.

In almost every form of communication, you announce who you are before you start the dialogue. So why not with your phone system?

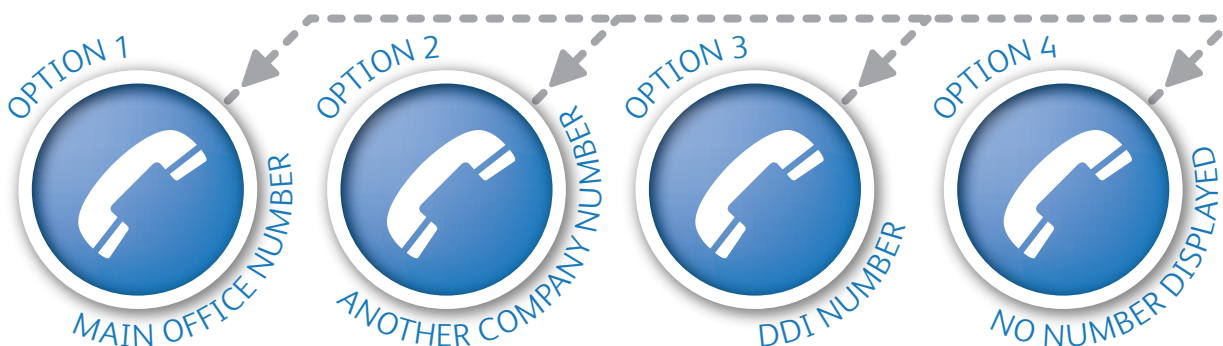

Conventional phone systems don't send caller ID correctly because they don't have the facility to handle all the options.

Our phone system can send Caller ID to be:

- your company's main number
- any other company number
- your individual DDI number
- or, if you prefer, nothing (withheld)

These options can be applied differently for each individual user.

This, for example, totally integrates home users into the system so calls made from home are announced with a company number rather than private or withheld.
